

November 2012 President's Letter

Things are pretty quiet around here right now. The weather has been nice, but very dry. If we don't get rain before the December shoot, it will probably be dusty. Pray for rain. There is no rain in sight in the near future.

Don't forget, the third weekend in January has been reserved for a work weekend to begin preparations for Jail Break 2013. It is coming on us fast, so if any of you would like to help out before then, or at any other time, don't forget that TX Alline and I live here, and would love to have you. You could get a crew together for anytime during the week as well. Any time between now and Jail Break would be acceptable. Much needs to be done with so little time and help.

I never thought I would see the time that I would be ashamed to be a U.S. Citizen. After the last election, when more people voted to uphold and advance their own small agenda's rather than vote for the good of the country makes me feel this way. I suppose more people had something to gain by voting the way they did, weather it be entitlements, flawed ideas about what is best for them and our country, or just believing that we can go on spending money that this country does not have. I know if I tried to do that, I would probably end up in jail for fraud. Talk about a pyramid scheme, our government is sure trying to pull one off on us.

I believe it was Pogo that said, "I have seen the enemy and he are us". But then, I don't suppose most people don't even know who Pogo was.

It would be nice to recycle old politicians more often. I'm just not sure what you could use them for, although I do have a field that needs fertilizing. Baby diapers and politicians should both be changed often, and for the same reason.

Enough politics for now. I just hope we can survive the next four years unscathed, but I really doubt it. Look for new restrictions on guns and ammo before we have another chance to re-direct the direction that we are now headed. I just hope it will not be too late.

I suppose that we should just "Cowboy Up" and accept the way things are for now, but that is awfully hard to do. Pray for our country.

See you in December.
