

July President Letter

Everything here at the range is doing O.K. Cow's are fat and happy, except that we separated a couple calves from their Momma's and they were unhappy for a couple of days, but they got over it. We had a couple of nice rain showers here since the last Match, and everything is still nice and green. We are supposed to possibly get some more before the August shoot. If we do, everything will still be looking good when you get here for the Match. Let's hope it will be so. There is no burn ban as of now.

While watching TV the other day, there was a program on about magnetism. My brain got to working and I think I have solved the problem of misses on the targets. It seems that like charges attract and unlike charges push things away, or something like that. Now, I theorize that there must be magnetic properties put into some of the bullets that I shoot. The bullets that have like charges are attracted to the target, while the ones with un-like charges push the bullets away. The closer the targets are, the less unlike charges are likely to have time to push unlike bullets away, and the longer the range, the more time the unlike bullets are likely to be pushed off course. The bullets with like charges will hit the target regardless of how far away they are. The same goes for the size of the targets. Now, instead of just making the targets constantly larger, all we need to do to hit any size target is to know which bullets are like and which are unlike. I have racked my brain and cannot seem to come up with a good way to do this. I would like to hear from someone who has solved this problem. I know there are some folks out there who know the answer, as they are constantly winning all the Matches. Come on guys, let us know which bullets to load and which ones to throw away.

By now you probably realize that I really don't have much to say this month so just relax and load all your bullets and take your chances. It seems that in hot weather, water has something to do with hitting the targets also. The more water you drink, the more hits you will have, but you may get tired from running to the bathroom constantly.

Keep cool, keep hydrated, and be safe.
